The Boston Ad- NEWFOUNDLAND'S vertiser has an edi- TRADE. torial this morning under the above

title, of which the following is a part:

"It is all very well to talk about reciprocity with Newfoundland at a time when her imports from the United States are increasing at the rate of $1,250,000 a year, but it makes the Gloucester fishermen smile. They know that no reciprocal arrangement that does not provide for the free entry of fish into this country will be acceptable to Newfoundland. Such an adjustment would be injurious to Gloucester and is therefore impossible, since our New England leaders in congress will take care of Gloucester's interests and will not permit any modification of the tariff which would benefit Newfoundland. That colony is now buying her foodstuffs in the United States, not in rely to be friendly, not simply to encourage the idea of reciprocity, but because these necessities of life can be purchased here at a smaller cost than in Canada, in fact (or even in Boston for that matter.)"

The Advertiser thus comes out frankly and admits that the reciprocity scheme would be injurious to Gloucester and would be to the benefit of the foreign country on the other end. After this admission, it cannot use the influence of the lamented McKinley, whose idea of reciprocity was that it was good as long as it did not injure or destroy any existing United States industry.

In closing, the editorial says:

"An American reciprocal trade agreement with either colony will not come until New England's representation in congress has been changed. Our last republican state convention gave its answer to the question of reciprocity with Newfoundland, and Gloucester will not allow the tariff revisers to go behind the returns."
